Reproduction of a Historical Archery Style Von DumDiDum It is no small feat to attempt to reproduce a historical archery style which has died out years ago. Mr Rodell manages to do so by having studied and discussed with others historical texts and the corresponding archery tackle. But possibly more importantly, the author is well placed to understand some of the more arcane aspects of this archery style because of his mastery of other Chinese martial arts: Mr Rodell is an accomplished Taijiquan and Chinese fencing instructor. This allows him to grasp and explain the full importance of details like elements of posture, physical alignment, and breathing. Fully recommended.
